The CGBP Practice Delineation is a document that articulates the trade skills certified through the attainment of the NASBITE Certified Global Business Professional credential. Rubric-based Assessment

In the assessment that follows, this training resource compared against every task and knowledge statement within the CGBP Practice Delineation using an evaluation rubric that distinguishes between the following categories of adequacy:

No Applicable Content	There is no content in the resource that would be helpful for someone wanting to attain this knowledge
Inadequate Resource	There is content in the resource that would be helpful for someone wanting to attain this knowledge, but that content is superficial or inadequate. So the information provided would not adequately prepare someone for the depth of questioning on this topic that can be expected on the CGBP exam.
Good Resource	There is content in the resource that would be helpful for someone wanting to attain this knowledge. The content is good and covers some of the important aspects of the knowledge statement. However, this resource could be improved in this area and it may be not be in-depth enough to prepare someone for all possible types of questions on this topic that might arise on the CGBP exam.
Excellent Resource	There is content in the resource that would be helpful for someone wanting to attain this knowledge. The content is excellent and covers all relevant aspects of the topic. It should be adequate to prepare someone for all possible types of related questions that might arise on the CGBP exam.

Qualitative Assessment

Additionally, a qualitative statement supporting the adequacy of the resource is also available at the end of this document. The qualitative comments give the reviewer of this training resource an opportunity to offer additional comments that may not be obvious to someone who relies on the rubric assessment alone. For example, if a resource contains particularly good visual elements, case studies, or highly interactive activities, these positive elements may not be evident from the rubric assessment alone. On the other hand, a resource may cover all relevant aspects of the topic, but at the same time, it might also contain extraneous material making it more difficult to use efficiently. Again, this might not be evident in the rubric assessment alone, so the qualitative assessment section offered at the end of the review gives the reviewer an opportunity to elaborate as needed.

Overall Qualitative Assessment

This qualitative statement (below) speaks to the overall adequacy of this training resource. These additional comments summarize important aspects of the training resource that may not be obvious to someone who relies on the rubric assessment alone.

Supply Chain Management could be very comfortably compared to a bunch of flywheels inside a hand watch, has to be precisely lined up, lubed, functional, and work in unity. In order to do so, companies have to streamline the flow of their products and services from the minute they receive the purchase order to the point of the agreed final destination. This section of MindEdge, Supply Chain Management provides an excellent base and will prepare the CGBP candidates with the knowledge to successfully pass the CGBP exam and achieve the nationally acclaimed certification.

Candidates will gain full knowledge with all modes of transportations and the multi modal system available worldwide, an insight of the container security initiative against terrorism, acquire knowledge on the Harmonized Tariff System (HTS), and familiarity with all US government agencies that regulated US exports to foreign countries.

In this section, you will learn about the role and the importance of the freight forwarders and 3PL in the exporting process, the INCOTERMS, accuracy of the documentations, custom brokers, packaging requirements, and government agencies involved in assisting exporters with various programs and resources.

When it comes to the movement of the products, candidates will be exposed to more in depth details of the technical side of the process which allow them to master the meaning of the power of attorney, all kind of documentations, license requirements, reporting system, container measurements, marine insurance, and foreign regulations as well as US compliance issues.
